Ronnisch Construction Group was selected as the Construction Manager for the Evangelical Homes of Michigan (EHM) in Saline, Michigan. The project consisted of the conversion of a surgical suite into a new, outpatient therapy facility. The space included open therapy areas, mat table rooms, hydroculator storage areas, a loud room, a hydroworx water therapy space, and a new men's and women's locker room. In addition to the interior improvements, exterior upgrades were also part of the project. Exterior work involved modifications to the courtyard area, including upgraded paving, plantings, and fencing systems. The overall design was intended to make the space friendly and inviting – a place for healing.
